

I believe that it is important to prevent mergers from producing large media conglomerates. I think this is important because multiple, independent sources of media promote the diversity of reporting and opinions that are necessary for a democratic society.

A press that is free of both government and excessive economic influence is an absolute necessity for the long-term health of the United States.